Volume

Average Daily Trading Volume

Average Daily Trading Volume" (ADTV) refers to the average number of shares or contracts traded in a security over a specific period of time, essentially indicating how many shares are typically exchanged on a daily basis, giving insight into a stock's liquidity; a high ADTV suggests a stock is easily traded due to high trading activity, while a low ADTV indicates less liquidity.

Most Traded Currency Pairs

- EUR/USD
- This pair is the most traded currency pair, making up 22.9% of the forex market. It's popular because of the prominence of the European single market and the United States.
- USD/JPY
- This pair is the second most traded currency pair, with a market share of 12.9%. It's sensitive to political sentiment between the United States and the Far East.
- EUR/GBP
- This pair is also known as "The Chunnel" and is considered strong because of the proximity of the regions and their history of trade. However, it's become more volatile in recent years due to Brexit.
